

MURDERING RACIST GETS 4½ YEARS

RACIST KILLER, Royston Worrell has got off with just 4½ years for the murder of 17-year-old Andrew Steventon. That's how much a white life is worth in Britain in 1997. If Worrell had been white and Steventon black, there would have been a media outcry. As it was, the verdict only just made the Birmingham Evening Mail and Sunday Mercury while the national dailies simply ignored it.

Andrew, a young man of exceptional promise and a Business Studies student at Park Hall, Castle Bromwich was firstly struck on the head with a bottle, then struck in the face and knocked down hitting his head. Andrew never regained consciousness and died of a fractured skull a few hours later in City Hospital Birmingham.

Race killer Worrell, 22 wriggled out of the murder rap by claiming self defence. Yet the facts are that Worrell, while drinking with friends, all of whom were black, threw a bottle at Andrew Steventon's head. Faced with a thuggish gang all older than himself, Andrew sought help from friends nearby. This group, about 15 strong, told Worrell to leave the campus of Aston University since Worrell had no right to be there in any case. It was at this point that Worrell smashed a bottle over Andrew's head and punched him in the face which knocked him down and killed him as his head hit the ground. Because, he said, he "felt threatened." This bald faced lie is the biggest insult of all since it got him 4½ years for manslaughter and not the life imprisonment he deserved. In attacking Andrew as he did he clearly felt no threat whatsoever. If he had done, he would have run off.

Andrew's family have been devastated by the murder and also by their betrayal at the hands of British justice. His parents Alan and Jayne have lost a son and Mark and Lucy have lost a brother.

It isn't enough that Andrew's family have lost a son and a brother, they now have to come to terms with the laughable sentence dished out to Worrell. Mr. Justice Jowitt talked a good fight when he said before gaoling Worrell:

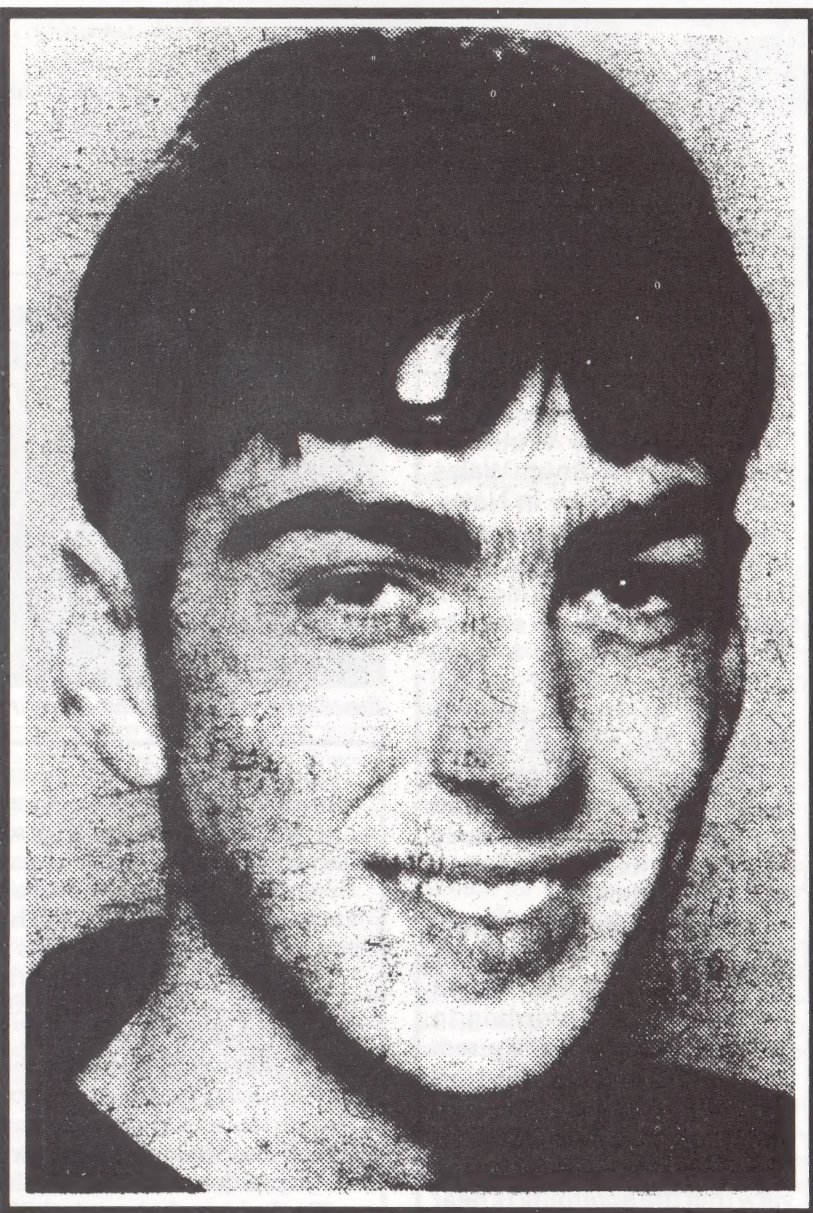

"You were in the wrong from the beginning throwing a bottle at Steventon which hit him on the head. You made no apology, no effort to leave and you were not intimidated by the large group of young men which returned." Jowitt said that none of this group had uttered a word or made a gesture in the least threatening to Worrell. "You hit Steventon and I don't accept you wanted to just cause a lump on his head or bruise his chin. You wanted to hurt him, to make him feel pain and you continued to hit Steventon until you knocked him down."

After all of this, Jowitt gave Worrell just 4½ years. What an insult!

Worrell, who has been on remand since June of last year will be out again in less than 2 years. But Andrew Steventon is dead and gone forever.

GOING BUST

The majority of political commentators agree that the economy is 'fine shape' and that Britain is currently the 'envy of Europe'. The fact that the economy is surprisingly buoyant has got something to do with government borrowing. While the public sector borrowing requirement (PSBR) has fallen it was still £5.6 billion for the first half of this year. But between 1992/93 and 1996/7 the government borrowed a colossal £170 billion doubling the national debt within five years. This money has got to be paid back. Debt repayment is now £24.6 billion per year. This is larger than the entire defence budget and eight times the transport budget.

At the same time manufacturing which is the bedrock of an industrial nation's wealth producing capacity has declined from 30% of economic activity in 1979 to 21% last year. Six million manufacturing jobs have been lost in manufacturing since 1979.

The collapse of the currencies of the Far East will unleash a wave of cut-throat competition which will drive what's left of our industrial base out of business.

Kodak has announced 10,000 job losses world wide. British job losses in London, Kirby, Notts., and Herts., are certain to follow.

In addition, another 1,500 workers are facing Christmas on the dole as RJB, Coates Viyella and Molins have issued redundancy notices to staff. RJB Mining said it would be cutting 500 jobs including 400 at Maltby colliery, South Yorks., 50 at the Prince of Wales colliery in South Wales and 45 at Thoresby in Notts. The losses follow the closure of the Ashfordby 'superpit' in Leicestershire three months ago which used to employ 700. Coats Viyella issued redundancy notices to 480 workers at its factory in Lurgan, Co. Armagh which makes clothes for M&S and Molins, makers of tobacco machinery said workers would go at its factory in High Wycombe, Bucks.

Meanwhile, social security spending remains high at £14 billion despite the fall in unemployment according to the 'official' dodgy figures. Social security spending should, of course, be falling if that were true but it is not. Economic analysts take the view that the economy is near its peak in the business cycle. If £14 billion is the lowest social security spending will go at the peak of the cycle, then it is sure to rocket as conditions worsen. The BNP can only stand to gain.

BATTLE FOR FREE SPEECH, LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

As the state persecution of a political activist draws ever closer, the case of Nick Griffin in connection with Rune magazine is starting to attract media publicity which will expose the 'trial' as a political show trial of the likes of Eastern Europe and China.

It is a commonplace among thoughtful commentators that Britain's long established tradition of freedom of speech has at best been badly eroded and at worst destroyed as one government after another has pandered to ethnic and Zionist groups as it has grovelled for their vote.

The clipping shown right comes from the Wales On Sunday, is generally fair, and shows that even the liberal media are gagging on the stench of the government's naked political persecution. It is significant that the trial has been scheduled to begin before the introduction of the European Convention on Human Rights which is supposed to guarantee freedom of speech.

In a further insult, the trial has been scheduled to begin on the United Nations Human Rights Day. As BN has commented before, Foreign Secretary Robin Cook has toured the world lecturing other nations about human rights while his own government is preparing to lock up its own dissidents!

The WoS also gave extensive coverage of Nick's imaginative distribution of the tape of his police interview which fully reveals the shallowness the government's case.

As the party has been saying to journalists, you may not agree with everything that Nick says, but he should at least be free to say it.

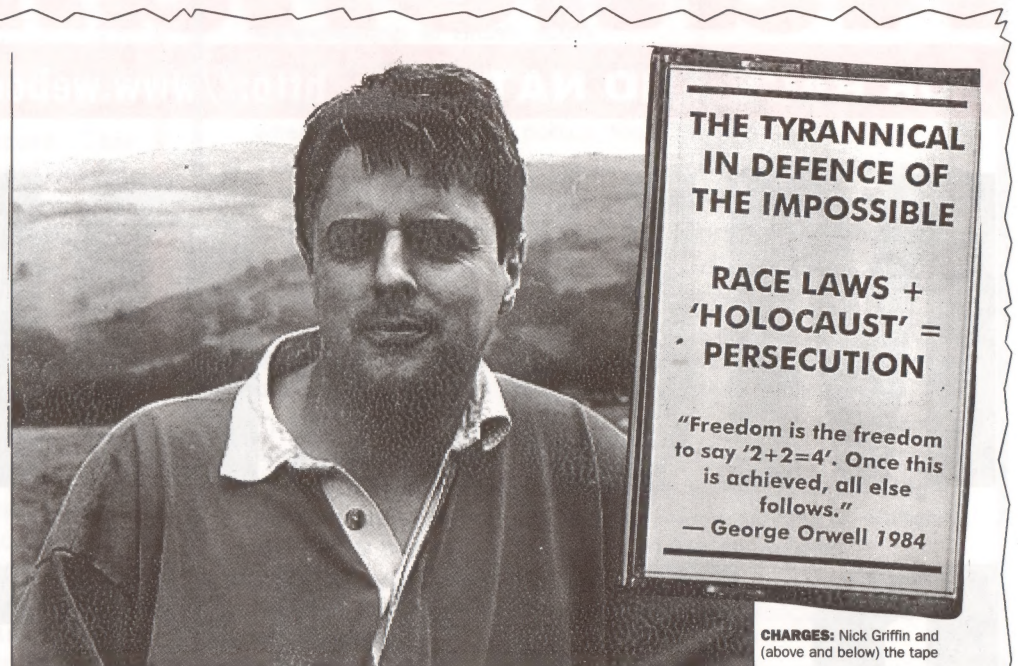

Establishment politicians are staying quiet on this one and significantly, the BNP was the only party at the election which had a manifesto commitment to freedom of speech.

The previously announced Defence Fund has now been closed, but even so, more expense is anticipated with regard to publicising the case to a wider audience and bringing surprise witnesses in from abroad, as well as providing enhanced security arrangements.

To that end, a new fund has been opened to blast the government blackout and BN asks everyone to give as much as they can to: 'Publicity for Freedom' PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW.

Incredibly, although 'holocaust denial' isn't an offence under UK law, Nick has been told that one of his 'crimes' is to have used the word 'holocaust'.

At a pre-trial hearing, the prosecuting counsel expressed great concern over the defence application to have Professor Faurisson accepted as an expert witness. Opposing the proposal, the Crown

A BRITISH National Party magazine editor facing trial on race hate charges is distributing cassette tapes of his police interview to raise funds for his defence.

Nick Griffin is distributing the tapes containing edited extracts of the interview that took place after he was arrested by officers of Dyfed-Powys Police last year.

In it he castigates former Montgomeryshire MP Alex Carlile as a Zionist and representative of 'organised Jewry'.

And in a covering letter he refers to his forthcoming court appearance as a political show trial, and urges people to contribute to his defence.

Mr Griffin's trial comes at a time when some Labour MPs have mooted the possibility of introducing a law that would criminalise publications that deny the Holocaust took place.

Such a law already exists in several other countries, including France, Germany and Canada.

His trial for incitement to racial hatred is due to start at Harrow Crown Court in north west London on December 10.

Yesterday he said: 'I would rather the trial took place in Wales, where I could be judged by my peers.'

'I am not happy about it taking place in Harrow, with its multiracial catchment area for jurors.'

'I am pleading not guilty. I do not believe I have published anything that incites racial hatred.'

The Wales On Sunday article which helpfully included the address of the BNP for all those wishing to obtain copies of the tape, or indeed information about the party.

claimed that his evidence would not be relevant and that: "It could open a can of worms."

When contacted, Professor Faurisson said: "I am ready to come. I shall open the can of worms."

Further supplies of the tape of Nick's interview will be available from December 12th for a minimum donation of £7 from the same address.

EastEnders described by Labour as 'half-wits, football yobs and racists'

LABOUR INSULT EASTENDERS

Labour councillor Mark Taylor has branded Bethnal Green pensioners half-wits and racists and compared them to football hooligans. He made the comments after getting a rough ride at a forum meeting after trying to ignore the concerns of local pensioners.

Taylor has said that he is suspending the quarterly meetings "until it can be proved that the forum is representative of people in the area and not just a bear pit of ne'er-do-wells, half-wits, bigots and racists."

Phyllis Sheehan, 73 said: "I don't think any of the public were out of order. If anyone did try and have a go at him it was because he never gave anyone a chance to speak."

Once again, Labour has shown its utter contempt for local EastEnders.

The nightmare Britain [is] perverted, brutal, horribly modish and clever-cunning, degenerate, exhibitionist, high-voiced and limp-wristed, seeking to shock and degrade. This is the Britain of a corrupt and depraved cultural élite, who control much of our art, cinema, TV and literature and whose overwhelming passion is to spit on everything the rest of us value.

The modern art scene in Britain is under the control of three men: Norman Rosenthal, exhibitions secretary to the RA [Royal Academy — Ed], Charles Saatchi, the multi-millionaire collector, and Nicholas Serota, boss of the Tate and of the infamous Turner Prize — itself an insult to the memory of our greatest painter. Rosenthal, Saatchi and Serota seek to impose their taste on us, set our standards and dictate our values.

The decadents have made skilful use of the cultural prize system to promote their counter-culture. If the Turner Prize has publicised the stars of the new RA shocker, the Booker Prize has done the same in literature. The decadents have escaped from their ghetto into our mainstream culture. The worst forms of this elitist disease do not merely besmirch things most of us love. They corrupt. In our cinemas the official system of

The Home Office plans to give foreign homosexuals with British boyfriends the right to settle here. Consider this:

One: How will these men prove they are gay and in love? How will we know they're not heterosexual illegal immigrants?

Two: When the relationship breaks up, what happens to the foreign boyfriend? How do we stop him from sponging off us? We should be tightening our immigration laws... Not letting the boys from Brazil in by the back door.

It is rather awkward for the People's Premier that, while he was away in Brighton making an impassioned pledge to strengthen the family, on the same day in Brussels his wife won a legal victory for live-in Lesbian perks. There is a glaring inconsistency here; Tony Blair must be finding it very difficult to be all things to all people. If you are supporting equal rights, of course everybody must have them, not least homosexuals. But if you are trying to support the family, by offering special privileges... then you cannot grant these privileges to people who aren't families.

RIGHTS FOR WHITES

Arthur Pendragon struck a blow for the real British at Southwark Crown Court at the end of October when he asserted that his religious rights had been infringed and that he should have his ceremonial sword returned.

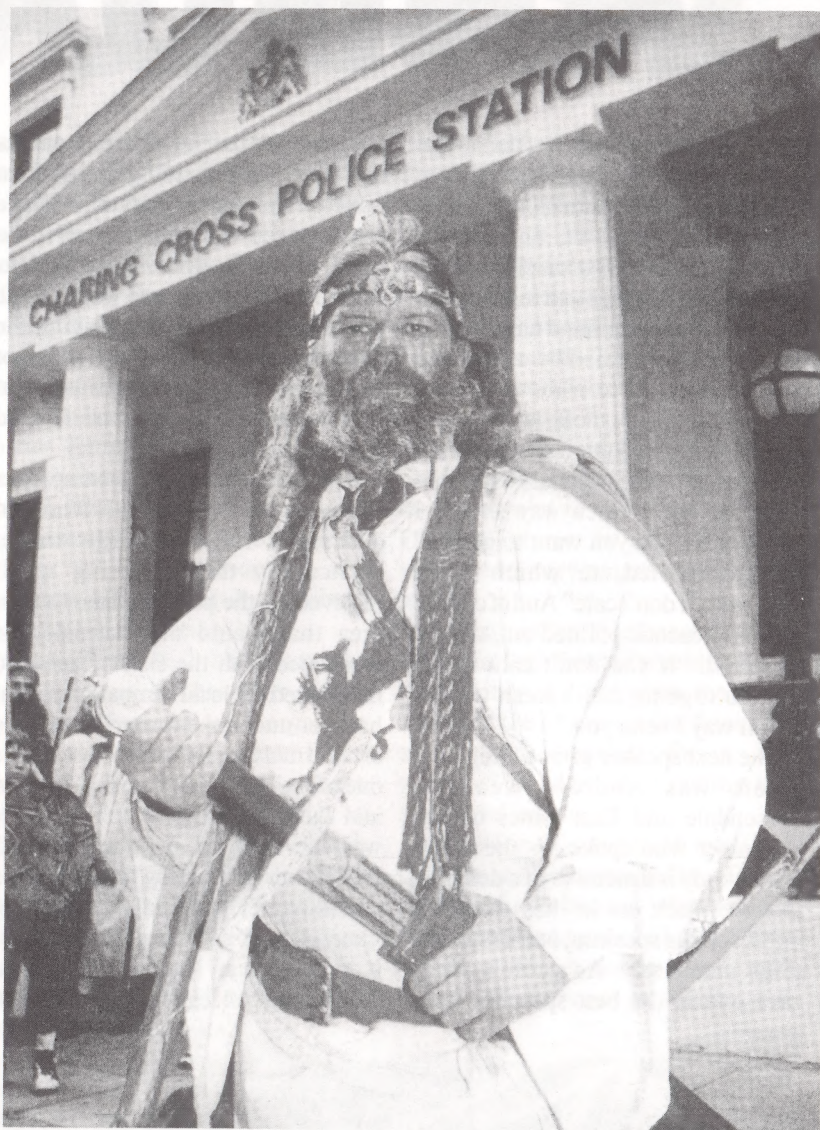

Pendragon, who is a druid, had his sword confiscated by police at a demonstration in Trafalgar Square in April protesting the denial of access to Stonehenge to followers of the old religion.

Pendragon, who walked from Stonehenge to London over three days with 20 pagan pilgrims in long flowing robes, was reunited with his three foot double-edged sword after the hearing. Judge Robbins, who had read reports from Professor Ronald Hutton, accepted that Pendragon is a genuine druid, and dismissed the charges, saying that it wasn't in the public interest to prosecute.

Readers of BN may be forgiven for thinking that Pendragon is eccentric and that the case is amusing rather than important. On the contrary, this ruling is important because for the first time since Sikhs won the right to carry 'religious' daggers about their persons, putting them above the law in this respect on grounds of religion, white people, or at least druids, now have the prospect of full equality before the law. The word 'prospect' is important, because the judge merely said that it wasn't in the public interest to prosecute, rather than he had an actual right to carry his sword.

Pendragon also has a claim to fame on another count — that of striking a blow against the government's tyrannical laws against free assembly. Two years ago, he successfully challenged the then Home Secretary Michael Howard's Criminal Justice Act which limits assembly in public places by citing the European Convention of Human Rights guaranteeing religious freedom. So not only is Pendragon a rather unlikely champion of Rights for Whites, but he is also a stout champion of freedom generally.

further, however, since black PC Gary Porter has been charged with stalking women by phone from his Greenwich police station. Porter is accused of making thousands of sex pest phone calls. If found guilty he could face up to five years in prison.

POLICING PRIORITIES

A report in The Times revealed that a meeting was held at the Home Office to discuss trends in crime which included the phenomenon of rising Asian crimes of violence (CoV). According to the report, the meeting was told that Asian CoV was the fastest rising category of crime in the country and that Asian CoV would soon overtake that of West Indian CoV. What this also means, and not reported, is that CoV committed by ethnic minorities is set to practically double!

Nevertheless, Home Secretary Jack Straw has shown where his sense of priorities lie by ordering police forces to 'root out racist cops'.

Taking their master's cue, Avon and Somerset police have published a policing plan which claims that the key to crime in Bristol is to get rid of 'racism'!

WHITES — VICTIMS OF RACE HATE ATTACKS

Last month savage attacks upon whites were made in Preston, Lancashire and in Poplar, East London.

In Preston, a man was set upon by 15 Asian men, beaten with pickaxe handles and left for dead. Residents heard the victim's terrified screams before finding him slumped with massive head injuries. The man is reportedly fighting for his life in hospital, with his family keeping a bedside vigil. The incident follows a number of motivated incidents just days before.

In Poplar, a teenager suffered stab wounds when two cars full of Asians pulled up next to him and his three friends. Screaming "get out of our area", the Asians leapt from the car and though the other three got away, the unlucky teenager was attacked, beaten and stabbed in the chest.

Whites are the victims of racism and the victims of racial attack. Last year 4 whites were racially murdered.

SETTLERWATCH

Sep 13 - Four illegal immigrants from the former Yugoslavia were detained by security guards at the Thames Terminal, Purfleet, Essex.

Sep 17 - three illegals from Albania were found in the back of a truck at the same place.

Sep 18 - Police arrested four men after a lorry driver spotted them leaping from his trailer at his depot in Erith, Kent. All the illegals — Albanians — were released on bail!

Sep 21 - 22 illegals — Asians, Turks and East Europeans — were found hiding in the back of a transit van in Grays, Essex. All the illegals were released on bail!

Sep 27 - An illegal from the former Yugoslavia was found wandering the streets of Purfleet.

Sep 30 - Three illegals found wandering the streets of Purfleet.

Oct 2 - Two Albanians found in the back of a lorry after arrival at Tilbury docks.

Oct 3 - Three illegals from Eastern Europe found at the Thames Terminal, Purfleet.

Oct 4 - eleven Eastern Europeans found on the railway line after coming from the Thames Terminal, Purfleet. On the same day, another two illegals found at the Thames Terminal.

That's 55 illegals hoping to sponge off the British taxpayer at £45 per week income support plus £90 per week housing benefit. Total for the year? £386,000 for just 3 weeks of illegals coming into Britain by Essex alone, nevermind the Chunnel, the airports and the ferries from France into Kent.

● 44,000 illegal immigrants have 'disappeared' into the woodwork according to official figure released by the Home Office.

● A police raid in Barking found evidence of 100 false child benefit claims by five immigrants including three 'asylum seekers'. The rip-off cost the taxpayer £471,111 none of which has been recovered. Police also found a suitcase full of false birth certificates. Gaoling the five, Justice Wilkinson said he would not be recommending their deportation back to Zaire.

REPATRIATION FILE

Saudi Arabia, after giving illegal immigrants due notice to go home and levying fines against immigrant employers, has deported another 1,834 by boat to Karachi in Pakistan.

A SPECIAL CHRISTMAS CURRYWATCH

A frozen food company has been fined over a lump of wood in an onion bhaji. Susan Wilson of Coventry bought a packet of frozen bhajis but had to spit one out after biting upon a 1½" x ½" piece of painted wood which she found in her mouth. After taking the bhaji encrusted wood to the council's environmental Health Inspector, officers visited Tavistock foods to find splintered pallets loaded with onions ready to be thrown into the bhaji mix. Tavistock foods were fined £2,000 and also £1,000 for a second offence relating to a customer who found pieces of chicken in a frozen vegetarian balti curry. The company which blamed a Pakistani worker who couldn't read English, was also fined £1,575 costs. Your resident curry watcher is amazed. Here is a company providing excellent products with extra chicken in curries and extra fibre in its bhajis and instead of being congratulated, they're prosecuted! The persecution of ethnic eateries and food companies has surely gone far enough.

In Enfield, north London the owner of a newsagent and a takeaway were each fined for poor food hygiene. Ruchia Khatun and Aros Ali, the owners of the Jasmin Indian takeaway which was shut down by an emergency health order, were each fined £1,000 and ordered to pay £250 costs after pleading guilty to five hygiene and safety offences at Enfield Magistrates Court. Health Inspectors found the premises dirty, with food left uncovered and no provision to control pests. Siddiq Azam, the owner of Newtime newsagents was fined £850 with £250 costs after selling food unfit for human consumption from his shop which was overrun with mice. While BN has no quarrel with enforcing hygiene law, these two cases have the smack of racism about them. Why is it that white owned premises are not similarly prosecuted and only Asian restaurants and shops seem to be falling foul of hygiene and safety laws? Surely the Health Inspectors are not saying that Asian establishments are especially filthy and pest ridden? Surely not!

Luckman Miah, owner of the Indian Ocean restaurant has been ordered by magistrates in Brecon, Powys to stay away from his restaurant after two assaults on customers — one man was punched in the face by Miah as he left the restaurant. Ruling that he was an unfit person to hold a drinks licence he was told his staff can hold it if he stays away from the premises from noon 'till midnight. BN says its an outrage that 'lucky' Luckman Miah, the Indian Ocean's chef cannot even be on the premises during business hours. As Miah himself said: "It's crazy." Don't these stupid magistrates realise that the lure of exotic eating is the unusual and exciting experience involved of sampling a foreign cuisine and its customs and habits? Haven't they heard of different strokes for different folks? Getting a biff on the face is half the fun! Don't let these bores put you off sampling the most varied cuisine in the world. Get down to your local curry out.

Bon appetit!

BNP ANNUAL RALLY

This year's BNP Annual Rally has been a fantastic success and a real morale boosting event for all who took part. The speeches were first class, the atmosphere buoyant, the collection and attendance impressive, the venue well appointed and everyone left with a renewed sense of purpose and optimism for the party's prospects for the future.

In common with other years, the party had to employ a cloak of secrecy around the event to prevent the enemies of free speech and democracy from sabotaging the rally. A measure of how far these evil people will go can be found in the fact that party members contacting possible alternative venues found that, in one area at least, no venues were taking any bookings for the 22nd of November—the date of the party's rally!

Despite the Stasi-like methods employed against the party, as with other years, the party surmounted all the obstacles to stage its most prestigious event of the year.

Thame in Oxfordshire played host to this year's rally. Thame, readers might care to know, is a nice and thoroughly English town with none of the unpleasantness associated with Britain's inner cities.

More than 300 party members packed into the hall to buy party merchandise such as T-shirts, posters, badges, magazines and papers etc. before the rally itself started.

David Bruce, Regional Organiser for North & West London and Herts chaired the meeting and a burst of applause greeted the first of several speakers from around the regions: Keith Axon, West Midlands Regional Organiser. Keith spoke of the task he was faced in contesting the number of seats set for the West Midlands and spoke of sleepless nights, before finding the last candidate and seat to meet his quota: Jeffrey Astbury in Coventry South. As Keith pointed out, the 50-seat campaign was a complete success with more than 2¼ million leaflets delivered for a 5 million readership, a very well done TV broadcast and a resultant 3,000 enquiries received into the party.

The next Regional Organiser to speak was East Midlands Regional Organiser

John Peacock. John spoke of the surreal way in which the British people are being sleep walked into handing their country over to the EU and thereby dispossessing their own children of their rightful heritage and inheritance. The Alice in Wonderland nature of the thing was exemplified by comparing our people to Alice who was lost in Wonderland as are the British. Where are the British people going? Turn a moment to Alice who asked of the Cheshire cat "Which way should I go?" "Where do you want to get to?" the cat replied, to which Alice answered: "I don't care." And of course, as John Peacock pointed out, the cat answered: "If you don't care which way you're going, then it doesn't matter which way I send you."

The next speaker giving a regional report was Andrew Wearden, Rossendale and East Lancs branch Organiser who spoke for the North West. Andy is a member of a debating society which, as he has said, has improved his speaking and oratorical skills immensely. As a result, Andy gave one of the best speeches from people to the patient local campaigns that have been building across East Lancs. They were proud to have contested four seats for the party in the North West he said. Everyone was really keen to get out and work for the party. One of the factors driving the party in the north was the problem of Asian gang violence which was now at least as bad as in London and affected even small communities...

David Jones was the next speaker and he spoke for the South West and described the campaign there, particularly the promising result received by the party in Taunton, an area that would not normally be associated with the BNP. Dave also mentioned the local campaigning that has been undertaken around the theme of child molesters. Child molestation is one of the big evils of modern Britain and the new anti-paedophile leaflet was, he declared possibly the best leaflet ever produce by the party. It is certainly effective and is generating many enquiries for the party wherever it is going out. And while, being a double sided A4 leaflet, it is pricier than

RICHARD EDMONDS:

"The BNP must become the voice of the community."

around the regions. Andy spoke of the problems of building the party in semi-rural areas and spoke of leafleting the beautiful dale country and of the encouraging support shown by local the current A5 range, it is more cost effective in generating enquiries. There are paedophile scandals all over the country which any BNP group or branch could take advantage of. He also said that the think tank which produced it would produce a whole range of new exciting leaflets.

Scott McLean spoke for Scotland and spoke of the Scottish contribution to the 50-seat campaign and which was the best Scottish effort to date: three seats were contested in Scotland which, along with the TV broadcast, generated lots of enquiries for Scotland. There was also, he said, an additional Internet site putting out BNP news from the north of England and Scotland.

Next in the party's long line of regional roundups came from Yorkshire with Tony McDonnell speaking on the Yorkshire part of the 50-seat campaign. Yorkshire BNP were proud, he said, to have contested four seats, one of which in Dewsbury gave an excellent result which pleased everyone in Yorkshire [and the rest of the country — Ed] to top 5% and save the party's deposit. Iain Wilson the Dewsbury Organiser was, he said, doing a grand job. It had been a tremendous boost to them all. The choice of another seat was driven purely by local people pleading for a candidate and finding the funds for it. Not only that, but these local people actively worked on the campaign distributing leaflets and talked to family, friends and neighbours. Such was the feeling among local whites that anti-British communist organisations who wanted to spike the party's campaign in Bradford West were run out of the area and were reduced to spending hundreds of pounds putting stamps on envelopes into which they pushed their grubby little tracts. That spontaneous feeling engendered among local whites brought much applause from all those present. Tony, who proved to be one of the best speakers of the afternoon concluded to more applause by saying: "BNP — British, Nationalist and Proud of it."

The final speaker from around the regions was Tony Lecomber, the party's East London Regional Organiser but who spoke for the whole of London.

He started by recounting the days of action undertaken by activists in London this year starting with the July Countryside rally and the Sports and shooters march and rally and ended with the gypsy crisis in Dover where London activists were joined by Kent BNP members to spread the word to the people of Dover.

"Community politics is sensible politics and build the confidence and morale we know we can build a solid support that way. Winning seats is the best way to win more community support, realistic, it is sustainable and as evident in France and Austria, it is a winning strategy."

On every occasion, he said, we'd had an overwhelmingly favourable response from the people present. Tony said that every region ought to be doing more days of action — leafleting markets and neighbouring towns in regional strength on a more regular basis. These activities, he said, are good recruiters, good morale builders and they don't require particularly big numbers.

Tony then talked of the by-elections used to build the party's profile and local election candidate Michael Davidson was singled out with a special mention as an example to the whole party.

The two saved deposits in East London were mentioned as were the formation of two new groups of the party in London: Waltham Forest and Bexley & Dartford.

On elections he said that canvassing was a must and that party units should avoid marginal seats in order to avoid a squeeze on the party's vote. We had, he said, to become the main opposition in every area the party operates.

Lastly, he said: "Don't let anyone tell you that you can only get good results in London. Look to Dewsbury. For those that dare and do, success will surely follow."

Following swiftly on was Nick Griffin who opened his speech by explaining that two lawyers had advised him not to attend rally. The prosecution at a hearing in Harrow Crown Court the previous day had complained bitterly about his distribution tensions caused by globalization and the collapse of traditional values, coupled with the growing realisation that New Labour has totally abandoned its old position as the defender of the interests of the working class, means that Britain is as ripe as any other nation in Europe for the rapid appearance of a mass 'fascist' movement. All that is missing, worries Eatwell, is an organisation with the ability to launch a modern, professional campaign — men in suits articulating radical nationalist policies in ways relevant to the problems encountered by ordinary people in their everyday lives.

"This afternoon," Nick told the meeting, "we've heard regional organiser after regional organiser telling us how his units are starting to do exactly that. And this is just the beginning. We've begun a series of training seminars with just that aim in mind. Training our new recruits to become new speakers, new organisers and new fund-raisers. Inculcating people with the need for disciplined, responsible political action, for professionalism and to have the positive attitudes which make people realise that, in the BNP, we have a movement which can win!"

The next speaker was National Organiser Richard Edmonds who started by remarking on the bravery of Nick Griffin who is speaking up for Britain. He reiterated the good news given by all the Regional Organisers with regard to the excellent election the BNP had and also the many enquiries brought in. Richard said that the party was entitled to congratulate itself. We achieved our 50-seat target, had 2¼ million leaflets delivered and got the TV broadcast where "Our man spoke to the great British people for five uninterrupted minutes." It was, he said, a tremendous achievement. Then he said: "Where do we go from here?" Recounting the accounts given by the Regional Organisers, it was obvious that we needed to put down local roots, to become the voice of the community, to become the political opposition. Richard mentioned the good response from the party's Dover campaign and also to the latest by-election success in London, that of Ken Francis in Newham who polled more than 11% for the price of £15 worth of leaflets. That's all it cost he said. We need more local campaigns and local leaflets.

Richard ended by saying that the next great leap forward would come in the summer of 1999 when the party contested the European elections and once again qualified for a TV broadcast in addition to putting out millions of leaflets.

Following this series of excellent speeches, rally chairman Dave Bruce conducted a collection which raised the magnificent total of £3,500. "This is where we get our money", said Dave, "From our members and supporters, not like some, from dodgy businessmen and crooks."

The final part of the rally was left for party leader John Tyndall who made an excellent speech, and he started by congratulating the party's activists on their general election achievement.

Referring to Nick Griffin not being able to speak of his case or even about race, he said: "What Nick can't say, we'll say for him."

Driving to the rally he said that he had seen the many foreign imported cars on the roads which contrasted sharply to a museum he had visited not long ago where every conceivable item was made in Britain. He then spoke of a mainstream journalist's analysis of the British scene six years ago, when he said that the one thing preventing the emergence of a large nationalist mass movement in Britain was a strong and credible Conservative Party which would steal nationalist slogans to head off any challenge. Now, Mr. Tyndall said, the Tories are weak, totally lacking in credibility and frightened to adopt even mildly nationalist rhetoric. This, he said, opens the way for the BNP.

He then turned his attention to the Labour party: "When Tony Blair comes onto the TV you wonder what brand of toothpaste he's advertising." The utter falseness is demonstrated, he said, by the following quote from Blair upon his election to the Commons in 1982: "We will negotiate a withdrawal from the EEC which has drained our national resources and destroyed jobs." Today, of course, Blair ignores the damage wrought upon Britain and professes himself in favour of it.

Commenting on the present feebleness of the British he said that a nation which had seen off the Armada and Napoleon could surely repatriate the immigrants who had flocked to Britain since the sixties. He finished that point by saying to great applause: "We will never, never, never change our policy on repatriation."

Mr. Tyndall ended by speaking of the recent Remembrance Day. The politicians who invariably turn up to pay their 'respects' were crawlers who were not fit to lick the boots of the war dead to whom they professed to pay homage. The proper way to pay our respects he said, was to work and fight to win back for the British people the land for which those war heroes had died. Mr. Tyndall received a massive burst of applause for his rousing finish which brought him a standing ovation from the rally.

Following the rally, while some party members and supporters facing long journeys home had to start back quickly, others piled into a very welcoming hostelry to talk over the day and socialise with other party members.

JOHN TYNDALL tells the rally: "We will never, never, never change our policy on repatriation."

NEW BNP LEAFLETS

All these children would be alive today if our spineless politicians had the guts to declare war on the paedophiles

Clockwise from top left: Susan Maxwell, Caroline Hogg, Sarah Harper, Sophie Hook, Daniel Handley and Karen Griffin. The killers of all these children were either known or convicted paedophiles — like dozens of other child-killers. How many more must die before something is done? Only when we lock away the perverts who prey on our children, removing them from society completely, will our streets and playgrounds be safe again. And for paedophiles who kill their victims, the only just punishment is the rope!

MEDIA DYNAMITE!

Two new party leaflets have been drawn up to capture public support using a different style of leaflet to that used in the past. These two new leaflets are 2-sided A4 in one colour and to help promote distribution as much as possible, the party has obtained a special printing deal to keep prices very low!

The issue of paedophilia or child molesters to give them their common name is big news around the country. Sex beasts are being routinely 'outed' and demonstrations are occurring against them. This is the leaflet to set the topic alight and give any BNP branch almost

THEME-PARK BRITAIN

How 'politically correct' townies are killing our country

ANOTHER farmhouse lies derelict, either to fall down or to become a jolly weekend cottage. Yet another family swallowed up in the city, while more and more farms every year are taken over by city speculators, while village schools, pubs and shops become holiday homes. Rural Britain has been systematically neglected and depopulated by a system based on city 'values' and short-term greed. What has this got to do with Field Sports? Everything!

Our masters in Westminster and the media have forgotten that a healthy countryside is the backbone of a nation. Their only concern is to preserve a few pretty bits as a summer theme park and tourist trap. The idea of a rural Britain which stands on its own feet, which has its own industries, traditions and sports actually frightens our urban masters, because it doesn't need them. They need our taxes, but rural Britain doesn't need the parasites in parliament. Whitehall and the TV studios. But people who don't need their 'help' make these power-junkies uneasy. That's why they love the 'underprivileged, multi-racial inner-cities', and it's why they hate the real people of rural Britain.

That's the real reason for their attack on country sports. Animal 'welfare' doesn't come into it. If it did, they'd do something about the scandal of ritual and kosher ritual slaughter, whereby hundreds of thousands of animals every year are slowly bled to death without any pre-stunning, in ways which would land any other slaughterman in prison. But the Labour Party and most 'animal welfare' fanatics turn a blind eye to this 'religious' savagery, just as they ignore the huge numbers of lambs taken by foxes and badgers. After all, cuddly foxes are politically correct, whereas native Britons, and our traditions and livelihoods don't count. We only built this country, we only pay the taxes — so we don't count!

As a matter of fact, the masters of urbanised Britain don't give a damn about foxes either. If they did, they wouldn't be so keen to condemn them to slow death by poison, habitat-destruction and gangrene from bullet wounds (where are they going to find 'marksmen' in a country where they've outlawed target shooting?). What they really care about is destroying our identity, our sense of belonging, our nationhood. To hundreds of thousands of Britons, their sense of identity is intricately bound up with hunting or other field sports — that's why they're the latest target.

That's also why weather forecasters don't use temperatures which actually mean something any more. That's why you can't buy pre-packed potatoes by the pound any more. That's why the country regiments have been amalgamated out of existence. That's why our kids come home from school knowing more about 'colonial exploitation' in Africa than about our own history. That's why TV soaps portray homosexual perversion as acceptable, even preferable. That's why our cities (because British people there are targets too) have been filled with housing tower blocks and with strangers from every part of the globe. That's why our political and economic freedoms are being submerged in a European super-state. That's why they 'won't leave anything alone'.

What we are facing is the organised destruction of our identity and freedoms by an out-of-touch but immensely powerful political and media elite. It can only be stopped, let alone reversed, when large numbers of ordinary Britons unite and organise to resist and reverse the process — when we British organise to take back control of our own country. That's the purpose of the British National Party.

guaranteed publicity with the party's strong, yet popular stance of advocating capital punishment for the sex monsters.

The other new A4 leaflet offered is the new Countryside leaflet, looked at in August BN, and which is more appropriate for rural areas since it is aimed at country folk. In this leaflet, the point is made that the country folk are under attack just as are the townies.

The party spells out its policies to regenerate the countryside, provide jobs and maintain the rural way of life.

Both leaflets are price £10 per thousand with postal charges of £6.40/1,000 and £8.55/2,000.

Because of the 'hassle-free' nature of both of these leaflets they are particularly suitable for isolated individuals who wish to leaflet their communities and get the word out where it may never have been heard before.

To assist that, prices on smaller quantities are as follows: £5.00/500 plus £5.15 p&p; £2.50/250 plus £2.50 p&p; £1.00/100 plus 95p p&p.

A WARNING FROM THE PRESENT

A lot of people never use deductive reasoning when they think. Now that phrase might seem a bit pompous, but it's just a simple concept. You gather some basic facts from your sources, you put the facts together and you come to a conclusion. You could look at Whitaker's Almanac or something similar and find out that a visa is required for a UK citizen to visit the States, but Americans can travel to Britain on the strength of their passport. Or that the U.S. does not allow its citizens to hold dual nationality, unless the other country involved is Israel. You see what I mean — you can deduce the true facts about the global pecking order for yourself, and not rely on the television or newspaper droolings about some alleged 'special relationship.'

Now, the BBC have just produced a heavyweight offering called 'The Nazis — a warning from history.' The thrust of the programme seemed to be that the German people were duped by the NSDAP.

Anyone with an inquiring mind and a few decent history books can quickly work out that all political and power systems deceive the masses. What surely counts is the degree and extent of that deception. The point made by the BBC has a universal validity. The hindsight of history does make it easy to see the follies of the past, but blinds us to the errors of the present.

In plain and simple words, were they being conned... or are we being conned?

Is one society sick, or is another sicker still?

Six million adult male jobs have been destroyed in Britain since 1979. That figure is not a misprint or error. Of those who do have jobs, probably only a small minority would describe their work as remotely fulfilling or interesting.

This is what the chattering classes euphemistically call 'the post-industrial society', but it might more accurately be termed a society about to enter the final stages of decomposition. A nation which finally realises it has taken the wrong path but is bemused as to what to do next. Strangely, many British people prefer to ignore the disintegration of their society, and take refuge in the fantasy world of TV and magazines. We might think of it as the ostrich syndrome...

So irresistibly reminiscent of the huge crowds at the chariot races during the last days of Rome as the economy crumbled and the barbarians reached the gates.

During a time span of under twenty years levels of poverty have risen to levels unseen since the 1870's. How many 'nice' areas are left now, after the evisceration of the British economy in accordance the nostrums of Milton Friedman? One author, American I think, termed even Oxford a 'clapped-out dump', after seeing numerous beggars camped out in the street. Presumably they're not undergraduates — but who knows what'll happen after the coming of massive tuition top-up fees?

The middle classes can no longer rely on their old-fashioned values of hard work and decency. Decency will get you nowhere when you work for a boss who demands 'flexibility' à la Tory Blair — arrive early, work your lunch hour, leave after seven. With the final reward of being shifted to a short-term contract or sacked the day before you've completed two years.

Pity you didn't think of becoming a drug dealer or pop star, old chap!

Meanwhile the private electricity and gas companies send out engineers who dispense useless or dangerous advice because they're not really engineers at all but unqualified salesmen working for commission. Newly dismissed teachers and miners are swooped on by jackal-like packs of 'financial advisers' eager to fleece them of their redundancy pay. One can't really blame the financial advisers — if they don't get the required number of victims, then they're out on their ear. And their bosses can select their successors from the thousands of applicants to a tiny ad in a local paper.

Aid agencies have complained that the cheap imports coming into this country are largely made by child labour. But the liberal wets of Oxfam oppose a boycott because it would cause unemployment in China!! Apparently they're less worried about it here — and in Wrexham more than one-third of children live on or below the poverty line. Did you ever see a Panorama on the numerous YTS lads killed in preventable industrial accidents? Of course not. The seedy chicanery of dormant Swiss bank accounts is more their style!

One lot of perverts and shysters takes over from the former collection of shysters and perverts on the front benches of the House Of Clowns, but it doesn't have any earthly effect. On the devastated council estates from Liverpool to Leeds, and from London to Manchester, crime and drugs take the place of productive work. Endless acres of peeling paint, broken world's ultimate weapon."

FOLLOW UP ON DOVER

In the week after the party's Annual Rally, another mass leaflet drive was held in the town of Dover. The dozen strong team of activists distributed the Crisis in Dover leaflet along with 200 copies of the November BN which featured the Dover crisis on the front page.

Once again, party activists met with an excellent response as they leafleted Dover housing estates, an army housing estate and the shopping precinct.

In the precinct, one lady stopped one activist to tell of some of the scandalous waste of taxpayers money on the latest immigrants to Britain. Gypsies could be spotted by the brand new clothes they were wearing — courtesy of the British taxpayer. The widespread feeling of Dover folk against the gypsies was evident throughout. Everyone wanted to read what Britain's patriotic party had to say about it! Dover folk were particularly impressed with the party's coverage of the problem in BN.

The feeling of the majority of Dover folk can be gauged from the letter printed to the right in the Dover Express.

SCOTLAND BNP HONOUR WAR DEAD

Scottish BNP members turned out on Remembrance Sunday on November 9th to honour Britain's war dead at a Glasgow cenetaph.

The patriots from the BNP paid homage to an earlier generation of patriots who had answered their country's call to arms to defend the British motherland. All the members present created a strong impression of loyalty, solemnity, and devotion to race and nation as, with heads bowed, they observed two minutes silence for Britain's war heroes.

Scottish Regional Organiser Scott McLean made a short speech in which he said that our remembrance of our war dead should include all of our war dead throughout the ages who have defended our homeland: The soldiers who routed Napoleon and the sailors that defeated the Armada. These should be honoured too and not just those from the two world wars.

Lastly, he reaffirmed that the country our war dead had gone off to fight for and which has since been sold out behind their backs would be

LOCAL LETTER WRITING CAMPAIGNS

One very good way for BNP branches and groups to get the patriotic message over to the wider public is by way of the local press. One letter can be seen by thousands of people and, intelligently written can increase the party's latent support within local communities. Such letters communicate a presence and can show the party in a good light. Following are three letters from

LEADER TIMES SERIES

It should be obvious by now that any criticism of the Muslim community directed at your newspaper would receive a hostile response. It amazes me, however, that Mr. Pendle cannot differentiate between church bells and an Islamic call to prayer, the former being traditional to this country and the latter a recent foreign import.

Would it interest readers to know that Conservative Central Office has finally admitted that multi-racialism has been a mistake but has flatly refused to rectify it? The British National Party, however, understands that unless humane, peaceful and well-funded repatriation takes place, Britain will cease to exist in anything but name.

As a racist, I seek the uncompromising preservation and cultural integrity of all races, not the least of which, my own, which multi-racialism is destroying and I therefore support a policy of repatriation of non-Europeans who obviously live in Britain solely for economic reasons when one considers the pre-eminence and importance placed upon their own cultural roots, traditions and ethnic way of life. Sylvia Noble, Colne.

EVENING MAIL

On behalf of the British National Party, I would like to state quite clearly to David McGill that the BNP has no links with the Orange Order in Ulster, nor do we wish to have any.

We do support fully, the loyalist majority in Ulster, in their struggle against the IRA. Also to reply to his comment "...the BNP's racist rubbish", I would like to challenge him as to whether he's actually bothered to research the BNP's policies.

Or could it really be that he's merely apeing whatever the biased media tells him to think?

How unfortunate too, that he talks of tolerance when he clearly shows a lack of it in judging the BNP.

If being a racist is about wanting a healthier, crime-free Britain, and a brighter future for my children, and theirs and if it means putting Britain's indigenous people first in jobs, housing and welfare then Mr. McGill and his intolerant cohorts can call me whatever buzzwords they like!

ALL the locals at one stage have paid or are paying Tax and National Insurance contributions. Why should our money go to these people? The local community have been told "there is no money." Old folk have no cold weather heating allowance. But money is no problem when it comes to the gypsies. It is handed out like confetti. The latest pay-out they can claim is going to classes to learn English and each person will get an extra £45 a week!

Us Dovorians have a right to be angry. Anti-social behaviour — uncivilised is more the appropriate word — this is what is happening in our town. The police are stretched to the limit everyday. The gypsies steal from stores and shops, steal from cars, offer their women to the locals £100 a night, defecate on pavements, call local girls white trash, and a rape charge is being investigated.

One old lady had a knife held to her throat in M&S. Young children pester people in fast food shops for food; the properties they live in are turning into ghettos; loud music and voices can be heard until the early hours. And do gooders say we should show compassion!

I hear most gypsies have gone to Ireland — the benefit is higher. By the way 3,000 immigrants enter this country every day. I think we are getting our quota.

DEWSBURY REPORTER

We were pleased to see your report of the recent visit to Dewsbury by BNP leader John Tyndall but we feel we should comment on the remark that the 'Dewsbury election count was surrounded by controversy'.

In fact, the 'controversy' was no more than an unfounded, ill-tempered Labour bleat that some voters had been confused by the similarity between our candidate's name, Frances Taylor, and their's Ann Taylor. This, they claimed, led to votes intended for Ann going to Frances. They were either too arrogant or too dim to understand that if there really was nay confusion, some of Frances's votes could well have been included in Ann's haul. The whole thing was too silly for words, reflecting Labour's childishness during the count itself.

BNP people present that night were highly amused by Labour supporters' antics, ranging from (at the start of the evening) an air of undisguised, casual contempt to outright fury as growing piles of BNP votes indicated that we were getting significant support.

In the General Election several constituencies had candidates sharing the same surname but only in Dewsbury were voters supposed to be so thick that they couldn't tell one from t'other.

Roger Barden,
Dewsbury BNP.

CORRECTION GENERAL ELECTION MAY 1997

Two of the election results printed in May's BN have been given in error.

The two results concerned are Bristol North West where the party's candidate Stephen Parnell notched up 265 votes and Birmingham Perry Barr where party candidate Lee Windridge won 544 votes. In both cases, while the number of votes given was correct, the percentage was incorrect. This error occurred because BN reprinted the results given out by The Times which might have been expected to get its sums right. Both results understated our percentage returns — by a third in the case of Bristol and by half in the case of Birmingham. While the error isn't large in absolute terms, it does affect the party's overall result and it means that Gillingham not Bristol scored the party's lowest vote in May. More importantly, this correction has to be made since the results printed in May's BN are an official record. This correction sets the record straight. The correct percentages are: Bristol North West 0.48% (not 0.32%) and Birmingham Perry Barr 1.19% (not 0.73%).

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM MAKE IMPACT

South Birmingham group of the BNP have made a real impact in Kings Norton with their local campaign Crackdown on Crime. Since the group started campaigning on the issue and bringing it to the attention of the people, the police force and the council have felt compelled to respond to the pressure and they have promised a Christmas crackdown on crime in Kings Norton. The local Evening Mail ran the story:

Police Blitz on Crimes and told of the local nursery falling prey to vandalism and of others falling victim to burglary.

Ethel Seaman, chairman of the residents board is quoted as being pleased that the police and council have finally listened. BN is pleased for her as well as the other local residents. No one should have to face the intolerable levels of crime all too frequently found in Britain's towns and cities. Nevertheless, the coincidence of the involvement of the party and the police action seems rather too much of a coincidence. South Birmingham BNP are pleased that their pressure has paid off and will continue to campaign in the area showing people that the BNP are, in the last resort, the only party willing to stick up for local people who have to put up with the problems of the inner city every day.

Sir,
Upon the Times Atlas gives details of population growth and natural increase. Ten non-white nations: China, India, Vietnam, Nigeria, Indonesia, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Egypt and Iran have a total annual increase of 63.6 million. contesting elections. Full sets of election papers were given out for study and talked through in detail, before a brief introduction to canvassing was undertaken with practice examples worked through by the 'trainees'.

Nick Griffin concluded by dividing the gathering into small groups to work out a sample problem, each team giving a 3 minute presentation. More of this type of seminar are to be held.

TRAINING SEMINAR

Just too late to go in last month's BN was news of the party's latest training seminar which has adopted a new look format from seminars of the past. Much more selective, focused and participative, the party is inviting limited numbers of Organisers and likely looking new recruits to train in the necessities of political activism.

Dave Bruce explained to the assembled gathering the basics of how to start a BNP group from scratch, while Paul Henderson gave a brief talk on security arrangements for party activities, followed by Tony Lecomber who explained the key points of

The highly successful anti-paedophile leaflet and the campaign around it in the South West was made the subject of a news item last month but which wasn't screened. That the film wasn't screened is proof positive that the party's new propaganda is very effective indeed. Our media masters are frightened to show it!

● In Bradford West, one of the signatories of Gary Osborn's nomination paper was made the subject of a communist leaflet calling him a 'fascist' which was delivered to local homes. He was surprised to find, one evening, a group assembled outside his home. After asking them what they were doing, he was even more surprised when they showed him the leaflets they'd had delivered before screwing them all up and saying: "We're on your side." This is another straw in the wind showing the growing support for the BNP. People are starting to wake up.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the European Community: trade with Europe where it suits us but no political ties.
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of Government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food; also the restoration of the fishing industry by protection of our traditional fishing grounds.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO; closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain; British withdrawal from the war in former Yugoslavia, where no British interest is at stake; the bringing home of British forces from Germany; the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- A return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
